Preparation for the Doctoral in Judaic Studies

Graduate students applying for the Doctoral In Judaic Studies generally have at least an undergraduate background in Jewish studies and in the discipline which they seek to pursue, as well as a working knowledge of Hebrew.

An undergraduate concentration in Jewish studies is not required, though training in the humanities or social sciences (e.g., languages, literature, philosophy, history, sociology or anthropology) is helpful.

The program requires 39 graduate courses plus a dissertation of six credits.

Clusters starts in the Spring (May), Fall (August) and Winter (January).

The cost per credit is $750.00. Scholarships are available. The date line for the 2012-2013 was March 1st, 2012.
